As the "Standards" Paris correspondent aptly research, time was when Frenchmen might have been inclined to rejoice in Englands' difficulties, to be arcastic over the rastle of twenty odd years of British administration; but those days have gone by, and, besides, it is well, though not generally, known that France in the north-western portion of the Artican continent is fose to face with the same mysteriously moving danger. The movement which is terring the pasceful, laborious fallahesen into fanaticarps for mischief is not confined to Egypt; it is not maying racial in origin, it is raligious upheaval self all across Northern Africa, and likely to be more violent among the wantike tribes of the French Sodach than among the unquirtied pessants of The "Times" has received the following from the Imperial Ottomas Embassy:—"A tolegram from Adas, poblished by some London pagers on the 2nd inst, stated that 16 batalions of Turkish reserves mutified in Yomes and set out for Sana, demanding to be sent home; that the commanderic-bid ordered the forts to open firs on the mutineers, who surreadered after hondreds of them had been killed; that a certain rebellious Imam's force were advancing, and, that a battle was reported with heavy losses on both sides. After giving several reasons for believing that there is no religious fanaticism in Egypt, "Al Zuber" writes: What fate is in store for not That is the openion that had polyenced agreement has given "new" colour to the Egyptian question, and made many Ortomans and Egyptians imagine that Egyptian given below the father than the face of the Egyptian framer bold in Egypt, and that this facet will lead to the conclusion of an agreement between Turkey and Great Britishi, whereby the former Power might assent to the administrative of Egypt by the latter; preserving for herself the seared right of sozonatny over this country, which should continue to pay her the sund tribtte, as is the case in Cypras latter power against whom the accusation is brought of fostering a Pan-Islamic movement. As indisputable evidence, the action of he As indispotable evidence, the action of her diplomacy at Constantingly, her intrigues in Byrin and Asia Minor, and especially the interference of the Emperor in person in favour of the Soltan of Morocco are mentioned. But it is further stated that her agents in Morocco, in Alguin, in Tripoil and in Egypt are so directly implicated that they are actually engaged in helping the spread of an acti-Oristian agrication. An official in the German Legation at Cairo is especially mentioned as being a particularly active occult director of the movement.

"Whether these latter statements be true or not I cannot say, but I have heard them from country, which should coatinns to pay her the sund tribute, as is the case in Cypres under the control of Bogland; and that Egypt will, at lact, be in a position to obtain an administrative independence. But we are of another opinion. Egypt, which lies— as an internal—between Constantinople and Mecca, enables the power that gets a firm hold of it to pread its uniformeen not only over Africa but also over Asia. The Ottoman Government is aware that the Mohamedan world sympathiess with it not only because it is a Molesm Government, but because of the not I cannot say, but I have heard them from cottain, however, that Germany has spaceraged Turkey against the Powers, and has embolden-ed Morocco to fluunt France; by so doing, she has encouraged, if not kindled, a spirit of resistance in the Mohamedan mind to all has encouraged, it not minited, a spirit of resistance in the Mohamedan mind to all Christian authority.

The French press, too, supports the firm attitude adopted by England in the matter of the Pan-lakamic movement.

The "Figano" says: "The cause which the British are defending in Egypt, whether in the listerior or on the Turkish frontier, is the cause of civilisation. This cause is the more particularly ours, incamend as we have so many Mussulman .subjects. The tolograms say Bir E. Grey's tone was grare. Events have proved, and will prove, that he does not exaggerate the seriousness of the situation. It is not by aware that the Suropasa governments have narrandared themselves to a policy of unlimited ambition: so that if one foreign power possesses Ergyt, the neighbouring countries—Syria, El Irak, Yemen and the Hedjirs will be exposed to great dauger. Therefore, it will be impossible for Turkey to agree to surrender the administration of Egypt to England. Good judges are of opinion that England will not create a serious change in the general policy of the world on account of Egypt, it will be not benefit her to declave a proteotorate over Egypt. Such a declaration will, on the one hand, show that the British Government has bruken its promiser, and perhaps set forces in motion that may lead to uppleasant results, and, on the other hand, will produce un owe benefit to England. The imaginary proteotors are one of the produce of the control of the control of the proteon of the control of the E Grey's tone was grave. Events have proved, and will prove, that he does not exaggerate the seriousness of the situation. It is not by chance that Trakey has violated the Pessian and Egyptian frontiers, and it is certainly not by chance that Trakey has violated the Pessian and Egyptian frontiers, and it is certainly not by chance that the other incidents are cocorring elsewhere. The visit of the Emperor William and the proteotion accorded by Germany to the Staltan of Morocco have everywhere awalesed Museuman fasaticism, encouraged Pan-Islamism and inspired barbarians with fresh hopes against civilisation. Every contry must take measures, as Great Britain has done in Egypt, to prevent the spread of the movement, and each must be on its guard.

SOCIALIST WORKMEN IN WARSAW,

A BARRISTER'S EXPERIENCE.

A wall-known barrister at Warnaw has had a possilar expreience, which illoatrates the way in which the Socialist, an derposilally the Polish party, manage their own and other people's affairs. The barrister was doing up a flat in his hoose, and while the work was in full awing a poor-looking man appind for a job, talling the urual tale of strikes, and a hongry family. He was given some work, but demanded such a large som as payment that the barrister refused to give him more than hall.

A few days later the man returned, accompained by two others, who presented the invertibable Browning revolvers to the barrister and demanded 'in the name of the Party,' that all the money, nine roothers, should be paid to the man who had applied for the bart the war was obadly done to do it over a gain. The delegates asked to see the work, and agreed with the barrister that it was not worth nine roots. A well-known barrister at Warsaw has had with the barrister that it was not worth nine ronkles.

"But I advise you to pay," one of them said, "because this is a desperate fellow, and it is not worth your white to risk being shot down it the street for the aske of a few nobles! will give you a receipt in the name of the party, and if the committee finds, on my evidence, that the work is not worth the money, the man will be punished. You may then rest assured that not a kopped will go to him; it will all be confined for the use of the party."

He then gave a receipt for inter orbibes, and a certificate that the work was badly does, and went away with the other "delegates" and the workman.

ARMY REDUCTION.

In view of the telegraphic summary of Mr. Haldane's Army proposals published on Satur-day the following article from the "Spectator" will be of inter will be of interest:

We sincestly trust that, the removes which have become when in the holes Press to receive the Canada and the control of the control of the Canada by two bettalions are untrue. We sympathies strongly with Mr. Haldana's desire to diminish the cost of the Army, for we have always held that a full Excheque, and the reduction of Debt which can only come with a foll Excheque, and the reduction of Debt which can only come with a foll Excheque, are samengt the most important forms of preparation for Imperial defense. But though we wish to see a reduction made in our military expenditors, and though we while such a reduction is quite possible without loss each a reduction is quite possible without loss. our mintary expeanators, and though we think such a reduction is quite possible without loss of efficiency if made on proper lines, we cannot see how the abolition of two battalions of the Goards is to be justified. If a decrease in our Geordes as to be justimed. If a decrease in our Regular Army is to be effected, it seems to us that it should be by reductions in the Line, and thereby reducing the number of men per battalion rather than by the abolition of existing caders. Before, however, we give the reasons which we hold are conclusive against a reduction of the Guarda, we charted the second of the contract o give the reasons which we hold are conclosive against a reduction of the Guards, we desire to say that we have no sympathy whatever with the violent and unfair stacks that are being made upon Mr. Haldane in regard to him military policy. We fully appresiste the great difficulties with which he is faced, and we are perfectly certain that whatever desirion he arrives atwhether it be right or wong in fact—will be reached by him colely because he considers it his duty to the nation, and that no party or personal considerations will be allowed by him colorisely because he considers it his duty to the nation, and that no party or personal considerations will be allowed by him colorisely because he considers it his duty to the nation, house to make they made the proposed or reduction considerations will be allowed by him to conveigh this request of days, the proposed consequence of the proposed consequence of the proposed or reduction of the proposed or reduction of the proposed or reduction of the proposed or reduced the proposed of reduced Army and a broad of the proposed of reduced Army and a broad of the proposed of reduced Army and a broad of the proposed of reduced Army and a broad of the proposed of reduced Army and a broad of the proposed of reduced Army and a broad of the proposed of reduced Army and a broad of the proposed of reduced Army and a broad of the proposed of reduced Army and a broad of the proposed of reduced Army and a broad of the proposed of reduced Army and a broad of the proposed of reduced Army and a broad of the proposed of reduced Army and a broad of the proposed of reduced Army and a broad of the proposed of reduced Army and a broad of the proposed of the proposed of reduced Army and a broad of the proposed of reduced Army and a broad of the proposed of reduced Army and a broad of the proposed of the proposed of reduced Army and the reduced and the proposed of the proposed of reduced Army and the proposed of t desire to say that we have no sympathy whatever with the violent and unfair attacks reconse to mobilication, but also endows us with a Reserve so large and so efficient that the number of Guards can practically be doubled by a stroke of the Ministerial pac. For ourselves, indeed, instead of abolishing any part of the Guards, we should like to see two more battalions added to the Irish Guards, and the Guards' service with the colours reduced to worgens, so as still further to increase the Reserva. Such a system, if it could be adopted, would give us a Guards coupts of counciling like thirty thousand mee, and a force which would be in proportion to its numbers, exceedingly chosp and exceedingly efficient.

its numbers, exceedingly cheap and exceedingly efficient.

There may, however, be sound reasons against the adoption of sech a course, and we do not therefore desire to prese it at present. What we do desire to do, and with all the emphasis at our command, is to saik Mr. Haldane to reconside the suggestion of abolishing two of the extra fact, and, if reduction in numbers there must be, to abolish two of the extra false patalons raised during the war. Remember that the Reserre man is the cheapout colder we can have, because, except, for his very small Reserve pay, he mainfaints himself in peace time, and yet is ready for war service if called upon. To abolish denards battalons is to abolish the torse which provides us with the largest number of these mess. Only if it toold be proved that the offer of short-services to a large number of men was preventing the salistance of Grands battalons are yet on the present establishment of Grards battalions are not been suggested that the present establishment of Grards battalions hancers recritising for the lain. To some planes are successful to the present establishment of Grards battalions hancers recritising for the lain. To some planes and the present establishment of Grards battalions hancers recritising for the lain. Guarda battalions. As far as we know, bowever, it has not been suggested that the present establishment of Geards battalions hampeer recruiting for the Lian. To sum up, we believe that the Guards give us the opportunity of raising so-cretain number of shortservice troops on an extremely chosen and efficient basis, and that this system should therefore be maintained, vern though the built of the Army most be raised under that the longer color-service which is alone compatible with the work of garrisoning India and the rest of the Bupire.

In a compared to the continued to be engaged in these pages that it is absolutely necessary that the Eritish Array should be acceptionally well found in the matter of guns. Instead of having a lower proportion of grust to meet that adopted in the great Continental armise, we hold that our proportion in passotism ahould be higher than theirs. Indeed, we think there is a good deal to be asid for our adopting the proportion of fire guns per thousand, which may be specially and officers of the great continents are such as the continents of the great continents are such as the continents are such as the continents are such as the continents will be passed as the following raise of the continents are such as a good deal to be asid for our adopting the proportion of fire guns per thousand, which may be specially and the proportion of the guns per thousand, which may be specially and the proportion of the guns per thousand, which was a great as good, we have not any unnatural scoses of them.
